SECRET SERVICE AGENT HALLS RE-LATES AN EXPERIENCE.

He Believes Providence Watches Over People Who Are in Danger-How He Escaped Death.

"I believe that Providence watches over men whose occupations lead them into danger," said United States Secret Service Agent Thomas F. Hails last night. "One particular incident in my career, which comes to mind just now, strengthened my belief in this proposition so that it amounts to a positive conviction. One time when I was at Covington, Ky., I was very desirious of meeting a certain criminal by the name of John Hough, for whose apprehension a liberal reward had been of fered. There were several detectives beside myself who had the same desire and each one was, of course, anxious to outwit the rest by being the man to capture Hough single-handed and alone.

"I had exhausted every possible clew to his whereabouts and was rapidly coming to the conclusion that I had better drop the case altogether, when an old lady BUT THE ARDOR OF THE SOLDIERS came into my office one morning and asked me if I wanted John Hough. FOLLOWED DIRECTIONS.

"I thought I would get the laugh on the boys," continued Captain Halls, "by house just about daybreak. I found the them to me. I tied my horse to the fence near the gate which led into the cornneld and commenced slipping as quietly as I could through the tall corn. I had not gone very far until I could see the log house which had been described by the Miss Mary Graybiel, who has recently re- old lady. But there was one thing upon which I had not reckoned, and that was the dogs, of which there were both numbers and variety. At once my ears were assailed with a veritable babel of yelps, barks and deep bays, varying in degree making the sound. Of course I knew that such a terrific uproar would wake up my man and that he would escape me if house. I made a quick dash for the front heard a window open at the back of the ouse. It didn't need anybody to tell me that my man was dropping out of a back window. I had previously observed that the corn surrounding the house had recently been plowed, leaving the ground soft and swift detour of the house, examining the soft earth as I went. I soon discovered prints of bare feet, a considerable distance part, thus indicating that whoever made the impressions was running as he die distinct parts. The edges of the gully were covered with a dense growth of shrubbery and blackberry briars, with an occasiona brush heap. I felt confident Hough would and a temporary hiding place somewhere in this thicket and immediately began to beat the bushes,' as they do in India olg game. Beginning at one side of the field next to the fence. I carefully parted the bushes and looked into the dark places. also kicking into them with my feet. In this manner I searched thoroughly both sides of the ravine. When I had completed my investigation of the ravine dayight was upon me and I realized that further search was useless. Accordingly, I retraced my steps, mounted my horse and went back to town, thoroughly disgusted with the whole affair. ON ANOTHER TRAIL. "In a day or two the same old woman entered my office again, and the first words she uttered were, 'You didn't get your man the other night, did you?" I could not but agree with her statement. 'Well, I can tell you where you can get him now,' she said. You go out on the Jimtown road, and just where you cross the river you will find three houses on the side of the hill. The 3:15 p. m.-Question box. Conducted by middle house is occupied by John Hough's other sister. John isn't doing any sleeping of nights now, but takes his rest in the daytime. You can catch him any morning, provided you succeed in reaching the house without being discovered.' at capturing the man the next day. This time I went in a buggy to the locality indicated by my aged informer. I stopped in the woods near the three houses and hitched my horse. Then I made a long detour to the rear of the house which concealed Hough, and was able to get within a few steps of the kitchen door without being seen by anybody. I was just in the act rying a water bucket. Her surprise was so alarm and put Hough on his guard. I stepped quickly into the first room at hand, there, to my delight, saw Hough stretched at full length on the bed, sound asleep. Walking up to the bed, I felt under the pillow for the weapon I felt sure I would find there, and grasped a big navy revolver, which was all ready for use upon an instant's notice. As I withdrew the formidable weapon from under his head, Hough sprang out on the floor with a muttered curse. He realized that resistance was useless and submitted with some degree of quiet to the operation of being handcuffed.

WAS NEAR DEATH. "As we were driving back to the city Hough scowled at me like a thundercloud and growled out: 'Confound you, I wish I had killed you the other morning when I came so near doing it.' My curiosity to learn how close I came to discovering his hiding place in that thicket prompted me to ask him to tell me about it. 'You'll never have a nearer approach to death." said he, 'than you did that morning when you were kicking about in the bushes near where I was lying hidden. When you were searching the edge of the ravine I was secreted in a clump of brush. I saw you drawing near, and felt sure you would rout me out of my hiding place. When you parted the bushes and looked in I couldn't understand why you didn't see me. When you kicked in there with your foot you came pretty close to my knee. I held in my hand the same revolver you took from under my pillow a while ago. You were so close to me I could have touched you with the gun. It wasn't over four inches from your stomach, and I resolved I would let you see me first and then proceed to "put daylight through you." The reason I wanted you to catch sight of me before I shot you was that I wanted to have revenge on you for putting me behind the bars several times before. ou parted the bushes at my side, peered in, and, not seeming satisfied, poked your John Freeman et al.; complaint on imfoot in, and then withdrew it, repeating the operation on the other side. "I must confess," continued Captain Halls, "that the cold chills chased each other up and down my spinal column while he was talking, although, of course, I didn't let him know anything of my sensations. "Who was the old woman who gave me he information?" repeated Captain Halls. "Weil, now, I am awfully sorry, but you will have to let that go until some other

"Moderately warm weather prevailed; local rains, although beneficial to growing crops, delayed harvesting and threshing, and, in some fields, injured hay and oats. Corn is growing rapidly and, generally, in silk and tassel, promising a great yield. Tobacco is in good condition. Young clover is doing well; having is most done and fair crops have been housed; the oat harvest is nearly done and promises an unusually good yield; the timothy harvest continues. Wheat threshing is nearly completed; in general the yield is poor, but there are some fields in the southern portion where the quality and quantity is better than expected. Potatoes promise a great yield; millet is fair, but meadows are weedy. Tomatoes, sugar beets and pickles are doing well; large loads of the latter are going to the factories. Plums and applies are still dropping; in the southern portion the apple crop will be only fair, but in the northern portion there are many orchards where the yield promises to be large. Special to the Indianapolis Journal. GREENSBURG, Ind., July 24.-The Republican congressional convention of the Fourth district, which will convene at North Vernon July 31, promises to be one of the greatest meetings of party leaders held for some time. Fred Landis, of Logansport; Hon. James E. Watson, of Rushville; State Chairman Hernly and all the candidates on the Republican ticket have promised to be present and a vigorous campaign in the new Fourth will be commenced. The contest for the nomination has narrowed down to John W. Holcomb, of this city, and Nathan Powell, of Madison, Mr. Holcomb is making a hard fight for the nomination, has made a thorough canvass of the district and has secured voluntary pledges sufficient to secure him the nomination. He will have a united delegation from this county.

No Enthusiasm in Hamilton.

pecial to the Indianapolis Journal. NOBLESVILLE, Ind., July 24.- The announcement of the nomination Captain D. F. Allen fell very flat upon the Democrats of this city. Allen's record on the money and colonial questions does not "set well" with those believing in consistency. Some time ago it was feared that Allen might get a few Republican soldier votes in Hamilton county, but his recent utterances on the Philippine question have made the soldiers lid for Landis. Allen will not carry any more than his party vote. The disaffections in this county against Landis, two and four years ago, on account of postoffice appointments, have all disappeared, few hours later. At midnight the boy Herand he will carry Hamilton by 1.700 majority this year. At the last election he carried this county by 1,642 and was elected by 1,090 in the district.

Receptive Democratic Candidates.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. SOUTH BEND, Ind., July 24 .- The Democratic congressional convention for the Republican State committee. There was | Tenth Indiana congressional district will be held at Monon Wednesday. There are no active candidates seeking to make the race against Representative Crumpacker. The list of receptive candidates includes Patrick Keefe, Kentland; John Ross, La-Michigan City. Ex-Lieutenant Governor Nye, of Laporte, has friends in the district who would be pleased to see him make the race, though the re-election of Representa- tered in six years.

Mr. Finley's New Paper.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. MUNCIE, Ind., July 24.-On Wednesday, Aug. 8, the first issue of The Rough Rider, a weekly newspaper edited and owned by Hon. Charles Finley, will appear at Pennville. Jay county. Mr. Finley is the Republican ex-secretary of state of Kentucky, who, with Governor Taylor is residing it killing of Senator Goebel. The paper will be filled with well prepared articles from leading Republicans and will have patrons throughout the entire country. Consider able space will be given to the political conditions of Kentucky, and the Republican party will receive undivided support from Editor Knowlton, of Corn and Glass published in Pennville, is an old friend of Governor Taylor and Mr. Finley.

Republicans in Conference. Special to the Indianapolis Journal. RUSHVILLE, Ind., July 24.-The Repubican county chairmen of the Sixth congressional district held a conference here to-day at which Colonel W. T. Durbin Chairman Hernly, Representative Watson, were present. The situation in the district was canvassed and found entirely satisfactory. While the meeting was an informal one, much enthusiasm in the work was manifested.

A Notable Political Acquisition. To the Editor of the Indianapolis Journal. Attorney Isaac Parsons, of this city, has written a letter to the chairman of the Democratic central committee of White county in which he says that the Kansas City platform is so antagonistic to his political convictions that he cannot participate in the deliberations nor affiliate with the Democratic party in the future. He says he would "rather give up his home and become a renter than to see the flag aken down in the Philippines." Mr. Parons was one of the leading Democrats of the Tenth congressional district. He was at one time city attorney of Lafayette, elected by the Democrats. He was from 1885 to 1887 proprietor of the Daily Dispatch of Lafayette, then the only daily Demo cratic paper in Tippecanoe county. In 1874 to 1875 he was criminal prosecutor of Tippecanoe county, appointed by Governo Hendricks. He was chairman of the Democratic central committee for sixteen years He was a candidate for representative to the State Legislature on the Democratic ticket against B. Wilson Smith, the Republican candidate, in 1884, with a Republican majority of about 1,500 against him Allen's nomination. J. M. Fippen, on be- votes. He was a candidate for the nomi nation for reprecongressional district in 1894, and was defeated by Mr. Kruger, of Michigan City, by a very small majority. He was one of the leading Democrats of White county, and up to the present time was the Democratic committeeman from Monon town-

Three Killed and Others Seriously Injured by an Explosion.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 24 .- Through the explosion of a steam tube connecting with the boiler in the steam yacht Trilby, owned and commanded by Fred L. Spink, o Scriba, Oswego county, three young children lost their lives, one was frightfully scalded and three other people were more or less burned here at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The dead are Iva Spink, nine years old; Gladys Spink, seven years old; Fern Spink, two years old. The wounded are Capt. Fred Spink, left arm and hand scalded: Mrs. Fred Spink: scalded about the legs and abdomen; Herald Spink, aged four, frightfully burned all over the body; Mrs. Jay Kelsey, slightly scalded from the knees down. Herald Spink's life is despaired of, but the others will recover. The Trilby was about to pass through a lock near the city limits when the accident happened. Without the slightest warning a flue in the upper row of boiler tubes loosened, and the scalding steam forced open the door of the fire-box, and, carrying hot coal, ashes and acids with it, flew al over the passengers.
